- Currency and International Monetary Systems
- Public Finance
- Technology and the New Industrialization
- Twenty-First Century Skills
- Sustainable Energy Production and Use
- Environmental Science
- Comparative Literature
- Philosophy, Anthropology and/or World Religions

Job Description:

- Conduct and synthesize available research and translate it into forms that are relevant, engaging, and practical to support educational program development.
- Communicate with a Knovva Coordinator through frequent updates (in-person preferred, remote possible as well) on research structure, formatting, content and adaptation.
- Research and develop case studies on specific topics to complement more broad-based knowledge.

Qualifications:

- Master's Degree required, PhD strongly preferred
- Experience in relevant content research required
- Experience conducting research in academic settings, publications preferred
- Experience conducting research on interdisciplinary topics
- Demonstrates excellent verbal and written communication skills
- Experience working in an international and multicultural environment

- Start-up experience a plus
- Team-player, sense of humor a plus

The Educational Researcher is a 1099 contract position. This position will require the candidate to work from the office at least once per month and work remotely on non-office days, between 10-40 hours per week. Knovva Academy's office is in the Seaport neighborhood of Boston. Salary is competitive and commensurate with experience. Must be authorized to work in the United States; sponsorship is not being offered at this time.

To apply: Please submit your résumé and cover letter. Applications without cover letters will not be considered. No phone calls, please.
